Review

The MSCI China Index increased by 5.9% in US dollar terms over the six months to 31 December 2016. At a sector level, Materials and Financials gained the most, while Utilities and Telecom Services declined.

Performance

The portfolio increased over the period. On the positive side, ASM Pacific Technology continued its strong performance, with earnings showing resilience despite the market slowdown. Shenzhou International was lifted by strong earnings results, mainly due to strong sales growth in Europe. Tong Reng Tang Technology rose as the government announced that price caps on drugs in China was to be lifted.

Detracting from performance, ENN Energy and Towngas China declined over concerns that increased regulations might impact future profits. Luthai Textile fell over concerns around weak demand from developed markets and a rise in protectionism from the US.

Portfolio changes

During the period, significant purchases included Techtronic Industries, a leading producer of power tools and floor care appliances. Around 75% of sales are to North America, hence a recovery in the US should be a positive catalyst for the company. We also bought TCC International Holdings, which manufactures and distributes cement and concrete in Hong Kong and China.

During the period we sold Truly International on concerns around its forthcoming capex cycle. The stock had also run up considerably over the year-to-date, which gave us cause for concern over valuations. We also sold Asustek Computer on concerns around the company's growth prospects.

^{*} As per the updated Explanatory Memorandum dated 7 October 2014, the existing units of the Fund will be referred to as "Class II" units.

Outlook

Though there have been some encouraging signs of production activity in China, we believe economic growth is likely to remain subdued in the near-term and the stock market to remain volatile. Several industries are witnessing a much-needed cutback in capacity, which should lead to better balance between supply and demand. We believe this is a necessary transformation which should make economic growth more sustainable in the long run.

We think the renminbi could come under further downward pressure, especially as the outlook for the US dollar and the US economy in general looks more positive. This could be challenging for companies with significant borrowings and currency mismatch. Mild inflation growth could help to stabilize corporate earnings in the short-term, but there is the risk that inflation could rise to a more dangerous level and trigger an aggressive government response.

In the US, a rise in protectionism could have a negative impact on China and the Asia region, if it comes to fruition. More widely, political developments in China, the US, the European Union and the UK have the capacity to disrupt global growth and should be monitored closely.

Despite these concerns, stock prices have generally remained fully valued, especially for good quality companies. Valuations for growth companies have been bid up, but we believe there may be growing headwinds due to base effects and growing competition. As always, we maintain a preference for companies with healthy balance sheets, good management risk awareness and reasonable valuations.
