Risk factors

This document is a financial promotion for the FSSA Greater China Growth Fund in the EEA and elsewhere where lawful. Investing involves certain risks including:

- The value of investments and any income from them may go down as well as up and are not guaranteed. Investors may get back substantially less than the original amount invested.
- Currency risk: The Fund invests in assets which are denominated in other currencies; changes in exchange rates will affect the value of the Fund and could create losses. Currency control decisions made by governments could affect the value of the Fund's investments and could cause the Fund to defer or suspend redemptions of its shares.
- Single country / specific region risk: investing in a single country or specific region may be riskier than investing in a number of different countries or regions. Investing in a larger number of countries or regions helps spread risk.
- China market risk: Although China has seen rapid economic and structural development, investing there may still involve increased risks of political and governmental intervention, potentially limitations on the allocation of the Fund's capital, and legal, regulatory, economic and other risks including greater liquidity risk, restrictions on investment or transfer of assets, failed/delayed settlement and difficulties valuing securities.

Reference to specific securities (if any) is included for the purpose of illustration only and should not be construed as a recommendation to buy or sell. Reference to the names of any company is merely to explain the investment strategy and should not be construed as investment advice or a recommendation to invest in any of those companies.

Performance review

Key contributors to performance over the past 12 months included Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing (TSMC), the leading foundry of advanced chips. Its recent earnings results were stronger than expected: with AI demand driving higher profits and strong guidance for the year ahead, TSMC announced new capital expenditure plans to try and narrow the gap between its supply of advanced chips and customer demand. Delta Electronics also rose. Delta has seen surging profits thanks to AI demand, as the company has a dominant share in power-supply solutions for Big Tech firms. New AI chips consume more power, and Delta's leading market share means it is well positioned to earn more revenue from its existing customer base as data-centre construction continues.

On the negative side, Shenzhen Mindray fell. The company faces headwinds in its domestic market, including the government's centralised procurement policies for medical equipment, which have put pressure on its pricing, and slowing capital expenditure among China's hospitals. However, Mindray's domestic franchise remains strong, and it continues to build its overseas business, particularly in emerging markets such as India, Mexico and Brazil. Meituan also declined after its earnings results disappointed. The company is facing intense competition in food delivery from Alibaba and JD.com, but retains key competitive advantages, with better unit economics than its peers.

Portfolio review

New purchases over the quarter included Centre Testing, the biggest private testing, inspection and certification (TIC) company in China. We like the company's prospects, given the potential for industry consolidation, the fact it is gaining market share from inefficient state-owned enterprises (SOEs), and deepening business with key accounts such as Wal-Mart.

We also reinitiated a position in China Resources Land, a property developer and owner of malls across China, using the proceeds from a reduction in our stake in China Resources Mixc, as the former was trading on more attractive valuations. CR Land's market capitalisation is twice the size of CR Mixc, but its profit is more than seven times over. Additionally, CR Land's share price has held up well despite the earnings downturn, indicating its resilience amid a challenging environment.

We sold Haitian International to raise cash for other ideas and divested AirTac as it reached our fair market valuation.

Stock spotlight

Tencent is the largest social media network and online gaming company in China, with growing businesses in online advertising, cloud services and e-payments/e-commerce. It is, in our view, one of the best companies to own in the Chinese internet space. Tencent has created an ecosystem of businesses which are unrivalled and should continue growing over the medium term. It has continued to develop new functions within WeChat (such as Video Accounts and Mini Shops), which should slowly improve monetisation and enhance the quality of the franchise. Tencent has been a major beneficiary of the rise in AI technology and 'smart' devices. It continues to deliver high rates of growth on top of an already substantial base. Its focus on evergreen games and the deployment of artificial intelligence (AI) internally has helped drive productivity gains and better advertising outcomes. Meanwhile, the rollout of various "user-friendly" AI capabilities within its ecosystem will further cement usage of its WeChat app while creating new avenues of growth. Tencent's Yuanbao AI assistant is already ranked top 3 in China (by daily active users), with integrated search, translation, writing and summarising tools.

Outlook

As bottom-up investors, our focus remains on selecting well-run companies with capable leaders, strong franchises, attractive earnings growth and sound balance sheets. Our portfolio is aligned with the structural trends shaping China's economy, and our holdings in market-leading businesses, led by secular growth trends and underpinned by rising incomes, are likely to remain resilient under different macro conditions.

Domestically, the prolonged weakness in the economy is changing the way Chinese consumers spend. While we still believe in consumption upgrading, we see people spending more on experiences – such as leisure, travel and tourism services. To support this growth, the government is continuing its targeted efforts to boost the demand side, with policies to support employment growth and higher minimum wages. We also expect further actions to stabilise the property sector which should bode well for consumer confidence.

On the manufacturing front, innovation and technological self-sufficiency remains among the key areas of focus for Chinese companies, and thanks to multi-year investments in R&D and supply chains, they are becoming increasingly competitive on the global stage.

From electric vehicles to medical devices, Chinese companies are growing their overseas businesses, while the government's "anti-involution" policy should help curb overcapacity and destructive price competition in key market sectors.

Looking ahead, we are optimistic about China's future, despite the occasional bumps in the road ahead. Meanwhile, the risk-reward looks favourable as many of our portfolio companies are trading at attractive valuations.

Our long-term investment themes:

- Dominant consumer franchises which have an edge in brand, distribution and innovation.
- The rise in healthcare spending, due to increasing incomes and healthy consumer choices.
- Beneficiaries of a smarter, more connected world.
- An ageing population and the growing trend of automation.
- Globally competitive exporters with a growing international business.
