Performance Review

Over the past 12 months, key contributors to performance included Tencent, which rose on continued growth in its social advertising and financial technology segments. The company has also benefitted from increased engagement on social media apps and gaming amid Covid-19 lockdowns. Taiwan Semiconductor (TSMC) outperformed, driven by improved profitability and solid sales growth guidance. The company has increased capital expenditure and added capacity, as it continues to see strong customer demand. On the negative side, China Taiping Insurance also detracted from performance, as the company had been de-rated for its over-aggressive expansion. A new chairman has been appointed to stabilise the business and slow its growth momentum; however, its changing product strategy resulted in lower agent productivity and a weaker product mix. AAC Technologies declined on concerns about weaker demand for its acoustics and haptics products.

Portfolio Review

New additions over the quarter included Sino Biopharm, one of the top drug companies in China. Their portfolio is going through a transition period, as legacy products have been hit by group purchase (GPO). As the government continues to cut generic prices, Sino Biopharm will need to invest in innovative drugs to grow in the future, and has been increasing expenditure on R&D. Additionally, the newly appointed professional CEO is highly experienced in capital markets and business development and could help drive the company forward.

We divested Trip.com on concerns about long-term alignment with management.

Stock Spotlight

Midea Group is China's largest home appliances company, with a comprehensive product portfolio that includes air conditioners, refrigerators, washing machines and small home appliances. We believe Midea is well-positioned to benefit from rising income levels and the "premium-isation" trend in China (as incomes rise, consumers demand better quality and more expensive products).

Midea's strong emphasis on research and development have improved its product quality over the years; and its market share in most home appliance categories in China ranks it among the top three. Meanwhile, its acquisitions of Kuka (top 4 industrial robot company) and Toshiba (Japanese premium brand home appliances) add new areas of growth, especially in areas such as logistics and industrials.

Outlook

China is eyeing a broad-based recovery, as the country has effectively controlled Covid-19 and is recovering well from the pandemic. From the economic data, industrial production, fixed asset investment and retail sales have all been improving steadily. The laggards are in travel and contract-based services such as leisure and entertainment, though these segments are also starting to show signs of an uptick. Export has been strong, thanks to improved demand from the US and Europe, as well as manufacturing companies that have relocated their production to China.

Looking forward, we expect the domestic recovery to continue, as activities normalise and the government continues to pledge support to the economy. Fundamentals are improving, with leading companies being the main beneficiaries as they have gained market share during the more challenging period. After a strong re-rating of valuations in the last two years, we expect earnings growth to be the main driver for investment returns.

We believe the Chinese government will be more aggressive in fiscal policies but more prudent in monetary policies as inflation risk could emerge in 2021. We also expect more favourable industrial policies to support innovation in several key sectors, such as biotech, information technology, alternative energy and advanced manufacturing. At the same time, supply side reform will continue. We believe China's economic cycles should be less volatile in future.

We continue to seek good quality companies that can benefit from China's increasing urbanisation, consumption upgrading, technical innovation, and the rise in healthcare spending. We aim to buy when they are trading at reasonable valuations, while striving to avoid permanent capital loss. Although there are still many uncertainties – and the tail risk of the Covid-19 virus cannot be ruled out – we believe companies with strong management and technical execution capabilities should emerge stronger as the global crisis subsides.

Our long-term investment themes:

- Dominant consumer franchises which have an edge in brand, distribution and innovation.
- The rise in healthcare spending, due to increasing incomes and healthy consumer choices.
- Beneficiaries of a smarter, more connected world.
- An ageing population and the growing trend of automation.
- Globally competitive exporters with a growing international business.
