CEO foreword

Across the globe, modern slavery continues to be a complex and far-reaching issue influenced by geopolitical unrest, macroeconomic conditions and climate change, all of which contribute to the many forms it takes.

At First Sentier Investors, we are committed to combatting modern slavery and as a global asset manager, we also recognise the broader role we can play in driving positive change.

During 2024, we remained focused on identifying and managing modern slavery risks across our operations and supply chains. This has included leveraging additional tools and methodologies and working more closely with our suppliers to gain a deeper understanding and more accurately measure risk. We have also continued to enhance our procedures and engage our people – ensuring they understand their responsibilities and can play an active role in our response to modern slavery.

Across First Sentier Investors, our investment teams have continued to evolve their approach to addressing modern slavery risks. Throughout 2024, the identification of these risks and active engagement with investee companies has remained central to our efforts. In parallel, we have continued to collaborate with industry and lead initiatives designed to support policy setting, improve disclosure and drive meaningful action.

Our Modern Slavery Statement outlines the progress we have made over the year in mitigating modern slavery across our business and our goals for the year ahead. As we move into 2025, we are committed to continually improving our approach to identifying, addressing and preventing modern slavery. Our focus is on driving meaningful change through our actions and collaborative efforts.

Additionally, in mid-2024 an AlbaCore working group was established to review their existing practices to address Modern Slavery and to collaborate to align their practices with the wider First Sentier Investors business, where appropriate.

02 | Our corporate operations and supply chains

Over 2024, we have remained focused on enhancing our ability to identify, assess and mitigate risks of modern slavery and human trafficking, both in our own operations and through our investment activities.

During the year, we continued to conduct a sectorial and geographical risk assessment on our operational suppliers. The risk assessment was carried out using our existing geographic risk assessment methodology that builds on the high-level sector risk assessment we carried out in 2022. This methodology used data drawn from the Global Slavery Index 2023<sup>1</sup>.

Where our Tier 1<sup>2</sup> suppliers predominantly operate in the same jurisdictions as we do, they were assessed as having lower exposure to modern slavery risk than in some other jurisdictions. Broadly speaking, such third-party suppliers include professional services firms that support us in providing clients with pooled and segregated investment management services, along with businesses we engage to help run our corporate operations, information technology systems, support services, merchandising, facilities and premises (e.g. cleaning and catering services).

To assess the geographical risk of our global suppliers, we used our finance systems to identify payments made to third parties within a specified time period.

We adopted the vulnerability model<sup>3</sup> from the Global Slavery Index that measures the extent to which a country's population is vulnerable to modern slavery. Using the total vulnerability score of each country (where a higher percentage means a higher risk of modern slavery) we analysed all our suppliers for geographic risk.

Any supplier located in a country that had a medium to high risk (i.e. a total vulnerability score of greater than 40 out of 100) was identified for further risk assessment. This amounted to 22 suppliers, with the majority located in India.

The 22 suppliers were then assigned a global industry classification standard<sup>4</sup> (GICS) code, and a further risk assessment was carried out based on the supplier's industry. All of the 22 suppliers were subsequently re-rated to medium/low risk due to operating in the professional services sector (for example, law firms or research houses), which is typically considered to have a lower risk of modern slavery based on the Global Slavery Index.

03 | Our clients

As both an issuer and investment manager of collective investment vehicles, and an investment manager of client appointed mandates, we acknowledge that modern slavery risks are not confined to our direct supply chains.

Our actions in accepting investments and on-boarding clients have the potential to contribute to modern slavery. Anti-money laundering, counter-terrorism and 'know your client' screenings help us complete due diligence and understand who our clients are.

These measures are designed to mitigate the risk of accepting money from entities and organisations that contribute to various social harms, including (without limitation) money laundering, terrorism financing, human rights abuses and modern slavery.

Case study Supplier due diligence initiative – progress update

Background

The Global Slavery Index 2018 identified laptops, computers and mobile phones as the products with the highest modern slavery risk imported by G20 countries. In 2023, further data from the updated Global Slavery Index confirmed that electronics continue to be the highest value at-risk import for the majority of G20 countries.

While our Tier 1 Information Technology (IT) suppliers predominantly operate in lower risk geographies, we anticipate that they are likely to source products and services from some suppliers operating out of higher risk geographies such as China.

With this context, in 2023 First Sentier Investors commenced a supplier due diligence initiative with selected IT hardware (electronics) suppliers and service providers, whose services include supply of hardware such as handheld devices, laptops, computers, network providers, data centres and other IT solutions. This initiative was facilitated as a pilot.

Our objective was to collaborate with our suppliers so we can understand more about their businesses and be better positioned to identify and support remediation of modern slavery risks in their supply chains.

To support us in this initiative, we engaged State of Flux<sup>8</sup>, a global supplier management specialist with extensive experience in sustainable supplier relationships. State of Flux assisted us to complete the analysis for the selected suppliers and facilitated one-on-one workshops. Our approach for this initiative was outlined in our 2023 Modern Slavery Statement with the following key milestones:

- Training of our IT Team members on modern slavery
- Identification of relevant IT suppliers
- Development, distribution and completion of a modern slavery survey to identified suppliers
- Evaluation of modern slavery survey responses from suppliers
- Supplier engagement and workshops

State of Flux developed a scoring methodology to assess survey responses on a scale of 'high risk' to 'low risk' using weightings from each section. Responses were aggregated to deduce a final risk rating which provided a view of the likelihood of modern slavery issues enabling us to prioritise suppliers for engagement and collaboration.

In summary, the survey was sent to 12 IT suppliers. We received 9 complete responses and 3 partial responses. From the 9 suppliers, we selected 4 that scored the highest risk for modern slavery to carry out training and workshops, along with providing them with an improvement plan.

Key findings

Of the 9 suppliers that completed responses:

- 78% engage their employees on human rights and modern slavery efforts through grievance and whistleblowing mechanisms, which we view as a positive step.
- 73% demonstrated an understanding of the key areas where modern slavery due diligence was necessary for Tier 1 suppliers. However, extending this due diligence consistently to Tier 2 and 3 suppliers remains a challenge.
- 67% had a modern slavery or human rights policy.
- 67% employ or contract with migrant or foreign workers. While no instances of unethical recruitment practices were identified through this exercise, this was identified and highlighted as an ongoing risk through the workshops.

Outcome

We recognise the importance of continuous monitoring, training and the significance of industry wide collaboration in the IT sector to drive meaningful change.

Following the supplier workshops facilitated in collaboration with State of Flux, we developed action plans for key suppliers that we engaged with, taking into consideration the findings of the survey, our workshop discussions and a desktop review of their publicly available policies. The action plans support suppliers in strengthening modern slavery due diligence.

To ensure we maintain supplier engagement and elevate the importance of understanding sourcing risks, these action plans will be monitored regularly for progress. As part of this process, we will continue to work closely with suppliers in outlining the initiatives, suggested actions, potential benefits and a defined milestone in the action plan.

Some recommendations were common amongst the suppliers such as:

- The need for transparency beyond Tier 1 suppliers.
- Improved due diligence of their supply chain for transparency.
- Collaboration across the sector to improve systemic issues related to modern slavery.
- Enhanced training and empowerment of their own employees to prevent and report risk or incidents of modern slavery.

We intend to work with the suppliers on the ongoing completion of the action plans and are also planning a second round of supplier due diligence with suppliers from other high-risk sectors.

Our efforts to map our supply chains are ongoing and highlight the challenges we face in tracing relationships beyond those with which we have direct engagement.

06 | Our investment teams' approach to modern slavery

As a global asset manager, we recognise our moral and fiduciary duty to identify and manage modern slavery risks and the role that we can play in driving positive change.

Given the nature of modern slavery worldwide and the risk it poses to companies across our investment portfolios, we believe it is imperative for us as investors to leverage our influence to address this issue. As investors of our clients' money in businesses, our approach to modern slavery is informed by risk identification and active stewardship. Through regular engagement with companies on modern slavery, we can work to address the risks that modern slavery poses in investment portfolios.

First Sentier Investors Modern Slavery Toolkit (Investments) serves as an important resource for our investment teams, offering comprehensive guidance on identifying and mitigating modern slavery risks within their portfolios. Finalised in 2020, through collaboration with our investment teams and external experts, the toolkit remains an effective instrument to inform how our investment teams approach modern slavery.

The toolkit is structured around five key pillars:

1. Guidance on identifying companies' risk of modern slavery within operations or supply chains.
2. Strategies for addressing any identified modern slavery risks.
3. An escalation process for incidents of modern slavery.
4. Governance processes to manage modern slavery risks within investment portfolios.
5. Reporting mechanisms for risks identified and actions taken.

We continue to supplement the toolkit with training and additional guidance from experts in the field, as well as our own internal expertise, on topics such as human rights risks in conflict-affected and high-risk areas, responsible contracting, forced labour risks in the renewable energy sector and remediation.

Additionally, our Responsible Investment team has developed an internal Modern Slavery Dashboard. This dashboard equips investment teams with the capability to pinpoint high-risk countries and industries connected to their portfolios, enhancing our proactive identification of modern slavery risks.

Investment teams completed the annual revision of their risk mapping. Below are the key risks we have identified for each asset class:

Asset class	Key risks
Australian Equities	Companies which have overseas suppliers in their supply chain may be exposed to elevated levels of modern slavery risk. Companies that investment teams in this asset class are exposed to, which may utilise overseas suppliers, includes those which operate in the speciality retail, metals and mining, health care and electronics industries. Supermarket sourcing and speciality retail are also high-risk areas.
Fixed Income, Short Term Investments and Cash	For the Asian region specifically, the risks of modern slavery are particularly related to construction and mining, food production, and industrial production, especially among issuers with large regional footprints.
Emerging Markets and Asia Pacific Equities	Teams that invest across this asset class have taken various approaches to identifying risk, including focused specific company research (particularly where there are controversies); developing a list of high-risk countries and sectors to focus on; and exploring issues such as conflict minerals. At-risk countries identified thus far include China, Indonesia, India, the Philippines, and Vietnam. At-risk sectors are those focused on the production of goods (e.g. apparel, personal products), electronics and banking.
Systematic Equities	Based on the modern slavery risk assessment tool, the highest risk is amongst metals and mining in Australia and Asia. There is also moderate risk amongst companies in the portfolio situated in the US IT and technology sector.
Global Listed Infrastructure	The greatest risks of modern slavery in the Global Listed Infrastructure universe are found in listed infrastructure companies that operate in Africa, Latin America, and the Far East. The team is also aware of the risk of modern slavery in infrastructure companies with ties to the construction sector. Furthermore, many utilities are investing more in the development of renewable energy, which heightens the potential risk of modern slavery within the supply chains associated with the manufacturing of solar panels and wind turbines.
Igneo Infrastructure Partners (Igneo)	Overall, the companies in which the team invests operate in low-risk jurisdictions and low-risk industries. However, a modern slavery risk assessment led the team to investigate two issues in more detail: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Use of sub-contracted labour, for example on construction projects or to cover seasonal peaks in demand. Although this is standard practice in the infrastructure sector, it can increase labour rights risks, for example if migrant labour is employed, labour hire agencies are used, or if there is a high degree of subcontracting with multiple layers, it becomes more difficult to monitor labour practices.</li> <li>2. The supply chains of portfolio companies, particularly forced labour risks in global solar panel supply chains. Igneo has issued updated guidance on this topic for portfolio companies. The updated guidance includes baseline measures the team expects companies to take when procuring solar panels, such as enhanced supplier due diligence and commitments to respect human rights in supplier contracts. Igneo has also partnered with an international NGO to deliver a workshop on this topic to portfolio companies that procure solar panels.</li> </ol>
Global Property Securities	While the property sector poses a low risk of modern slavery in its own operations there is higher risk in wider sector supply chains. This is particularly the case in relation to the procurement of building materials, construction and within property management services (e.g. cleaning, repair, security or waste management), especially as these services involve high use of agency and migrant workers and have a high turnover of personnel. That said, in recent years, most companies have successfully identified, assessed and eliminated risk at the Tier 1 supplier level, albeit that these areas are considered relatively low risk overall. The Asian market remains a risk within the construction contractor and property developer sector. The team has been reassured, through its continuous engagement process with the companies in the portfolio, that the risks at the Tier 1 level are very low. Despite these efforts, the team acknowledges that the supply chain in this region is challenging and remains a focus in the medium term.

07 | Addressing risks and reporting on progress

Coming together as an industry, agreeing effective actions, pooling resources and knowledge and being transparent and consistent with reporting are all essential to our progress in combatting modern slavery risks, in both our own right and as part of the wider industry. During 2024, we continued to collaborate with the industry and our stakeholders to share our progress and work towards common goals.

Industry collaboration

First Sentier Investors continues to use its leverage as a global asset manager to convene and chair the Investors Against Slavery and Trafficking Asia-Pacific (IAST APAC) initiative<sup>1</sup>. This investor initiative is designed to promote effective action by investee companies to find, fix and prevent modern slavery, labour exploitation and human trafficking across the value chain.

When engaging with companies on modern slavery risk, the engagement framework builds on the principles of the 'Find It, Fix It, Prevent It' initiative led by CCLA Investment Management in the UK<sup>2</sup>. In 2024, the initiative continued to build on its work from previous years, applying these principles to improving data disclosure.

In 2023, a working group of IAST APAC developed a set of recommended 'core metrics' that companies can disclose to help better identify modern slavery risk. These were distinguished as 'input' and 'output' metrics. Input metrics focus on understanding whether a company has the right policies and processes in place, output metrics focus on how they are applying them in practice.

Following this work, in 2024 the working group engaged with various stakeholders to promote the adoption of the core metrics through disclosures or data collection. IAST APAC partnered with ISS Stoxx<sup>3</sup> to embed the core metrics into their modern slavery solution. ISS Stoxx is continuing to expand its suite of modern slavery data and analytics. Through integrating these core metrics from IAST APAC into their modern slavery solution, this will assist investors in their reporting, risk management and engagement activities.

As investors increasingly prioritise ESG factors and work with ESG data providers to do this, it signifies an important step for disclosing information that will better support investors to identify modern slavery risks within investment portfolios. This is not a comprehensive solution to the problem, but it will help investors refine areas of concentration when assessing modern slavery risk in their portfolios.

IAST APAC won the 'Recognition for Action – Human Rights' category at the Principles for Responsible Investment (PRI) Awards in October 2024. This award is recognition of the work undertaken by investors to promote effective action in finding, fixing and preventing modern slavery in operations and supply chains. Further information is available on the IAST APAC website.

Management reporting

Management information has been developed and is reported to the Global Investment Committee<sup>4</sup> annually to increase transparency on how we are reviewing potential risks of modern slavery and human trafficking in our investment universe.

Case study First Sentier MUFG Sustainable Investment Institute - Modern Slavery & Remediation – An Investor’s Guide<sup>5</sup>

The First Sentier MUFG Sustainable Investment Institute (the Institute) is supported by both First Sentier Investors and Mitsubishi UFJ Trust and Banking Corporation, a consolidated subsidiary of MUFG. However, the Institute is separate from First Sentier Investors and MUTB’s investment teams, allowing it to consider topics from a wider investor perspective. Enhancing its quality of research, it has an external Academic Advisory Board which provides guidance on the Institute’s research agenda and adds academic rigor to its research output.

In 2024, the Institute published a report titled ‘Modern Slavery & Remediation – An Investor’s Guide’. This report analyses the role that investors can play in facilitating remedy and provides case studies which demonstrate examples of remediation in practice. The report is a joined collaboration between the Institute and Walk Free.

A key component of remedy is the prevention and mitigation of future harm. Hence, it is key that investors engage with companies across various stages of the remediation process, including preceding and subsequent stages.

Investors can enable remedy in several ways, and the report provides examples of actions that investors can take before, during and after finding cases of modern slavery.

The report provides recommendations to support investors to provide or enable remedy including:

- Understanding existing obligations for businesses to provide or enable remedy, including relevant international frameworks, and national legislation including human rights due diligence laws.
- Maximising leverage to influence company behaviour to effectively facilitate provision of remedies.
- Being prepared to engage with companies across various stages of the remediation process.
- Considering wider stakeholder cooperation to strengthen the remedy ecosystem and joining innovative initiatives that aim to enable or provide remedy, such as collective remedy schemes.

Additionally, the report emphasises the importance of investors partaking in larger stakeholder initiatives. Through wider stakeholder cooperation, investors can maximise their leverage to influence company behaviour. Examples provided include IAST APAC, CCLA Find it Fix It Prevent it, and Stewart Investors conflict minerals and semiconductor supply chain engagement.

08 | Benchmarking our effectiveness

Our investment teams

When we engage with investee companies to arrive at our benchmarks, we collect both quantitative and qualitative information.

The quantitative information we collect includes:

- the number of companies engaged with;
- the number of companies which had identified modern slavery incidents within their operations and/or supply chain;
- the number of companies which provided training to their employees and/or suppliers on modern slavery; and
- the number of companies which assessed risks beyond Tier 1 of the supply chain.

Because data alone is not enough to assess effectiveness, we also collect qualitative information in the form of case studies.

Company engagement presented as a percentage for each year

Source: First Sentier Investors
RHS: Right hand side

The lower number of companies engaged with in 2024 is partially due to a reduction in the number of investment teams at First Sentier Investors. Despite this, the data indicates that there is a higher proportion of companies that are providing training to their employees and suppliers on modern slavery and are assessing risks beyond Tier 1 of its supply chain. Unfortunately, the proportion of companies detecting and disclosing modern slavery incidents in their operations and supply chain has continued to trend downwards since 2021.

In an effort to address this, in 2024 the Institute provided guidance on how investors can effectively support and enable remedy at various stages through the remediation process (as identified in the case study in section 7 above). The purpose of the report was to raise awareness with both companies and investors on the importance of remedy and the role different stakeholders can play during the remediation process.

Companies will not be at the same level of understanding as these areas are an evolving space, but we hope that by continuing to engage with key stakeholders, we can work with companies to take them on this journey with us and create a supportive ecosystem for change.

Our corporate operations

In 2024, we engaged with Slave-Free Alliance, to assess our internal policies and procedures in line with global leading industry practice in mitigation of modern slavery and human rights violations, and to assist us to identify gaps for improvements.

As a result of this engagement, during 2024 we:

- Improved our Modern Slavery Toolkit (Supplier Business Owners) to include a remediation process that addresses both the impact to people and to business.
- Facilitated scenario-based training to our Task Force and other key employees across First Sentier Investors. This training aimed to identify and map appropriate remediation that could be taken should we identify a risk or incident of modern slavery in our own business operations or our supply chains in the future.

- Re-drafted our Modern Slavery Policy, to broaden the scope to a Human Rights Policy aligned with UN Global Compact Human Rights Principles. This policy will be implemented in 2025.
- Broadened the scope of our anti-slavery supplier contract clauses to also include human rights.

For our own corporate operations and supply chain we currently assess the effectiveness of our actions with reference to the following metrics:

- Our progress against our modern slavery road map as outlined in our 2022 Modern Slavery Statement and in section 5: "Mitigation of Modern Slavery Risk".
- The percentage of First Sentier Investors employees that completed mandatory online modern slavery training and knowledge check (100% in 2024).
- Our supplier engagement:
  - 10 IT suppliers were sent a comprehensive questionnaire for modern slavery as part of the modern slavery due diligence initiative in 2023. In 2024 we received 9 supplier responses.
  - In 2024, 10 building service providers were sent a comprehensive modern slavery questionnaire. Responses will be evaluated in 2025.

There are no identified incidents of modern slavery in our corporate operations and supply chain, however we recognise the likelihood of modern slavery existing within the tiers of our supply chain. We continue to collaborate with our Tier 1 suppliers to identify and manage these risks within their operations and/or supply chain.

In 2025, we will seek to establish more effective measurement indicators and qualitative information to guide and represent our continuous efforts to combat modern slavery risks in our own corporate operations and supply chain.

09 | AlbaCore Capital Group

In November 2023, AlbaCore, a European alternative credit manager, joined First Sentier Investors. Over 2024, we have started work to align relevant practices and initiatives with the view to incorporate AlbaCore's activities more holistically into our future modern slavery reporting. As a result, we have reported AlbaCore's activities separately for this reporting period.

About us

Founded in 2016, AlbaCore is now part of the First Sentier Investors group. AlbaCore's investment philosophy is focused on capital preservation and generating attractive risk adjusted returns through the cycle for its investors. AlbaCore manages assets on behalf of global pension funds, sovereign wealth funds, consultants, insurance companies, family offices and endowments around the world.

Corporate operations and supply chain

AlbaCore is compliant with the UK's Modern Slavery Act (2015). It's Modern Slavery Statement outlines AlbaCore's recognition of possible modern slavery risk exposure(s) and confirms compliance with the UK Act.

During 2024, AlbaCore made several adjustments to its supplier due diligence process. Prior to onboarding a new supplier, a number of key operational factors are considered. Factors include, but are not limited to, a modern slavery assessment. Checks typically include review of the third party's process to identify, monitor and manage possible modern slavery within its own supply chain, and, where applicable, a formal modern slavery statement on the third party's website.

AlbaCore is also committed to partnering with suppliers which support its values and principles as outlined in AlbaCore's Outsourcing Policy. In 2024, a risk assessment on AlbaCore's existing operational supply chain was undertaken, using the same methodology as First Sentier Investors geographic risk assessment. The methodology used data drawn from the Global Slavery Index 2023.

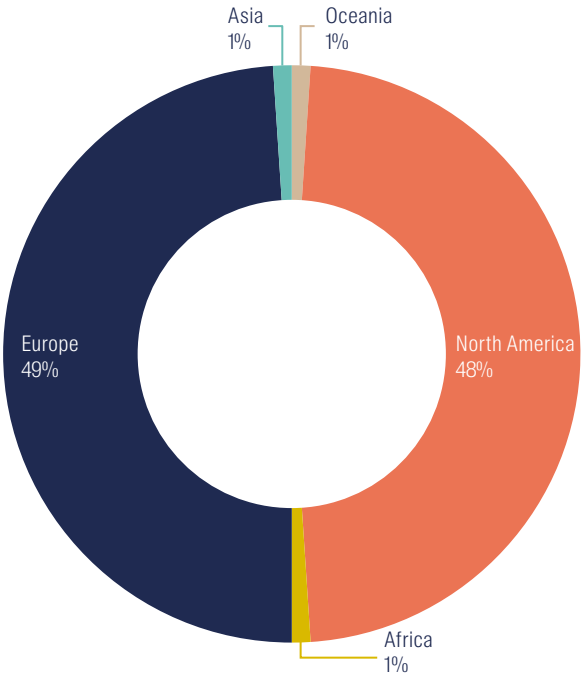

AlbaCore's Tier 1 suppliers predominantly operate in Europe and North America. Suppliers were assessed as having lower exposures to modern slavery risk than in some other jurisdictions. Third-party suppliers include professional services firms such as diversified support services, data processing, application software providers, human resources, legal and building management services.

To assess the geographical risk of AlbaCore's suppliers, a full list of suppliers was compiled, identifying industry and geographical locations.

The model used by First Sentier Investors, outlined in section 2, 'Our Corporate Operations and Supply Chains', was then applied to all identified suppliers.

As a result, four suppliers were identified as medium-low risk suppliers.

AlbaCore’s investment team’s approach to modern slavery

During pre-investment due diligence, AlbaCore’s investment team assesses material environmental, social and governance risk exposures. Where determined financially material, either owing to business-related risk sensitivities or sectoral risk exposure, the investment team will discuss relevant Environmental, Social and/or Governance (together, ESG) factors for a proposed investment with members of AlbaCore’s Investment Committee (IC):

- In respect of modern slavery risk(s), AlbaCore does not systematically assess this theme across all its investments during pre-investment due diligence and post-investment portfolio monitoring. Rather, and as stated above, protentional exposures to modern slavery risks will be assessed and further investigated where deemed financially material to the portfolio company. In addition, as stated in the Negative Screening Process, AlbaCore excludes portfolio companies with direct exposure to child and forced labour, where information is available at the time of initial investment.
- During due diligence, the investment team is required to answer several questions as part of AlbaCore’s ESG Risk Matrix. Within the Social section, supply chain, labour and human rights topics are considered. Where modern slavery is identified, and not captured by the Negative Screening Process, potentially material risks will be escalated to the ESG Manager, Head of Risk and IC members prior to investment for discussion and resolution, where possible and practicable.

Owing to the nature of the assets AlbaCore invests in, data availability at the time of initial investment might be limited. Analysis is undertaken on a reasonable endeavours basis at the point of investment; and material risks are monitored throughout the lifecycle of a loan.

In respect of structured credit investments, AlbaCore considers ESG factors relevant and material to each Manager prior to investment. To assist with the assessment, AlbaCore has developed an ESG checklist to determine each Manager’s ESG profile; an ESG due diligence questionnaire is also issued during pre-investment due diligence to support conclusions about each Manager’s ESG credentials. Responses are included in a Collateralised Loan Obligation IC memo and contribute towards an overall manager-level ESG score. Modern slavery is not specifically assessed, but on occasion might form part of due diligence undertaken on select managers where information is supplied to AlbaCore in a timely manner.

Addressing and reporting on risks

Over the course of 2025, AlbaCore aims to strengthen the integration of modern slavery risk in its investment practice<sup>1</sup>. Consistent with, and supplementary to, existing responsible investment processes, AlbaCore will undertake a heatmapping exercise, seeking to identify potentially material risk exposures at the portfolio company level. This project will also formally underpin AlbaCore’s engagement strategy, where reasonable, proportionate and practicable.

The summary contained above is an indicative overview of the actions AlbaCore intends to take during 2025, but may be subject to ongoing review and change. AlbaCore will report on any changes and track progress in future modern slavery statements. (Identifying and managing modern slavery risk will be assessed in accordance with AlbaCore’s investment philosophy and risk management process and financial materiality is at the core of such future assessments.)

1 Specific asset classes are to be determined, but will likely to cover private, liquid, opportunistic, dislocation strategies and AlbaCore managed CLOs, only. Structured credit assesses ESG practice at the Manager-level and does not follow AlbaCore’s “ESG Risk Matrix” process.
