The value of investments and any income from them may go down as well as up and is not guaranteed. Investors may get back significantly less than the original amount invested.

The Fund may experience the following risks:

Emerging market risk: Emerging markets tend to be more sensitive to economic and political conditions than developed markets. Other factors include greater liquidity risk, restrictions on investment or transfer of assets, failed/delayed settlement and difficulties valuing securities.

Currency risk: The Fund invests in assets which are denominated in other currencies; changes in exchange rates will affect the value of the Fund and could create losses. Currency control decisions made by governments could affect the value of the Fund's investments and could cause the Fund to defer or suspend redemptions of its shares.

Value Investment Style risk: The fund has a 'value' style bias to its investment approach. A value investment style looks for companies or assets that are undervalued at the time of purchase with the belief that their value will increase over time. Under certain market conditions, value investing may underperform relative to the market.

For further information on risks, please refer to the Risk Factors section in the Company prospectus.

Investment should be made on the basis of the Prospectus and Key Information Document. If you are in any doubt as to the suitability of any of our funds for your investment needs, please seek independent financial advice.

Commentary 1st January – 31st March

Global markets declined broadly due to escalating tensions in the Middle East. Energy was the strongest GICS sector as Brent Crude rallied +70.9% on an impasse in the Strait of Hormuz. The impact of rising energy costs on inflation prompted central banks globally to shift towards tighter policy settings and reinforcing the rotation from Growth into Value. Markets are now expecting two interest rate hikes from the European Central Bank and the Bank of England. The U.S. Dollar Index rose +2.4% during March, as markets pivoted from pricing 60bps of cuts in the US to 7bps of hikes. Gold declined 10.9% in March, finishing +7.8% up in the quarter. Emerging Markets outperformed their Developed Markets counterpart over the quarter, although gains were pared back in March due to geopolitical tensions. Asian equities underperformed during the quarter, with Taiwan and South Korea paring back its strong rally earlier in the quarter.

The Fund's outperformance was driven by strong stock selection and positive allocation effects across both regions and sectors. Regionally, North America was the largest contributor, driven by our underweight allocation and strong stock selection. Emerging Markets was also another key contributor benefitting from our overweight allocation and favourable stock selection. On the other hand, Japan was the only region that performed poorly driven by weak stock selection. From a sector perspective, Information Technology was the key contributor, benefiting from our underweight allocation and positive stock selection. Energy and Health Care were other key sector contributors. Whereas, Industrials was the largest detractor driven by weak stock selection. At a stock level, the largest contributor was the underweight to Microsoft Corporation and the largest detractor was the underweight to Exxon Mobile Corporation.
